

PRESS RELEASE

27TH September 2010

BRICKLAYERS ARMS VOTED TOP PUB RESTAURANT FOR THE SECOND YEAR IN A ROW BY FOODIE GUIDE LOVERS

This week, the Bricklayer's Arms in Flaunden, Herts, was presented with the award for best restaurant in Hertfordshire by the readers of the prestigious Foodie Square Guide for 2010.

This annual award now in its eighth year was presented to the Bricklayers Arms voted for by the readers of THE FOODIE GUIDE.

Restaurant guide publisher Paul Allen said;

"We are extremely pleased to see the Bricklayers Arms achieve this award for a second year in a row.

They have now won this award three times. We take into account all of our readers comments, feedback and votes which is used to determine the winner of the award".

"Alvin and his team have done Hertfordshire proud with their continued attention to detail from the fresh local produce and extensive wine list to the whole dining experience. Congratulations to them on becoming Hertfordshire's restaurant of the year 2010".

"We are all thrilled to have won this accolade for a third year since 2006. These awards are testament to the efforts of our professional team, who have helped create a top-notch food destination for food in the heart of the countryside. It's especially heart-warming that this award was decided by the diners themselves - the people we really care about,"

"You don't have to travel into the heart of London, when you have great locally sourced food in a beautiful country setting, right on your doorstep?." said owner Alvin Michaels.

Since buying the 18th century Bricklayers Arms in 2003 the Michaels (also owner of the Nags Head Inn & Restaurant, Great Missenden which has recently won a Rosette for its Culinary Excellence) have carefully maintained the beautiful Grade II listed country pub.

With the help head chef David Long and Michelin trained executive head chef Claude Paillet, twice winner of the Publican Magazines "Chef of the Year", whose recipes have been featured in OK! Magazine and an excellent recent review by Times Magazines' food critic, Giles Coran have transformed Bricklayers Arms into an award-winning gastro pub.

-ends-

Photo attached: Paul Allen of The Foodie Square Guide (left) presenting the award to Alvin Michaels, Bricklayers Arms (right)